Notes:

Please note that the Center for Islam (CIS) holds copyright for all material published in its semi-annual journal, Islam & Science. Often substantial editorial changes are made in the process of review and copy-editing of the material and even though authors are free to use their articles for personal use, and they can publish these articles elsewhere if they are substantially modified, CIS alone holds the copyright permission rights to grant permission for reproduction in edited volumes.

Requests to reprint material from Islam & Science must be made in writing (sent via mail, email, or fax). Please allow two to four weeks for permission requests to be finalized.

If you are an author, please indicate specific format of reuse of the material which first appeared in Islam & Science.

Please submit your request to:

Fee(s)

- Our fees are based on many factors including amount of material, print run, territories for reuse, etc. An invoice for exact amount will be sent along with license for use; all fees are to be received before material is sent.
- If you are a non-profit organization, please include as much information as possible about the organization and the project.

Miscellaneous

CIS only grants non-exclusive one-time use rights to other publishers.
